JAPAN PREPARES HER PEOPLE FOR RECEIPT OF NEWS OF LOSSES

Announces 1 Aircraft Carrier Destroyed; Another Heavily Damaged

IS NOT THE FULL REPORT

Russian Defenders of Sevastopol Fight Off Nazi Attempts

By International News Service

After preparing its people for bad news with the observation that "losses must be expected," Imperial Headquarters in Tokyo broke its silence on the sea battle off Midway with the announcement today that one aircraft carrier had been destroyed and another heavily damaged.

Damage to a cruiser was also admitted as well as the loss of 35 planes in the abortive assault on Midway.

This modest summary of losses was far less than the damage announced by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander, who listed the Japanese units destroyed or damaged as 4 or 5 carriers, 3 battleships, 4 to 6 cruisers, 3 transports and a destroyer—a total of 15 to 18 ships.

On the credit side Tokyo claimed to have sunk two American aircraft carriers of the Hornet and Enterprise types, and to have downed 120 planes in the Midway action, and to have sunk a transport, and destroyed 14 planes in the raid on Dutch Harbor, off the Alaskan coast.

These grandiose claims were far out of line with Admiral Nimitz's official report listing loss of a destroyer and damage to one carrier.

While the Japanese communique made it apparent that the Japanese were claiming a victory in the Midway battle, there was no attempt to explain why the attack had not been pressed home instead of ending in a hasty withdrawal of the Nipponese fleet, and although Tokyo ignored this point, it claimed that American positions in the Aleutians had been "reduced."

Operations in the Aleutians are continuing, Imperial Headquarters declared, and this was in line with a recent statement by Admiral Ernest J. King, U. S. naval commander-in-chief. But no details of the actions in the North Pacific have been announced by

FLAG SHOULD BE DISPLAYED EVERY DAY DURING THE WAR; ONLY FEW DISPLAY IT HERE

Every resident of Bristol who has a flag should be displaying it this week, which is Flag Celebration Week. The week will end Sunday which will be observed as Flag Day.

There is a very poor display of flags in Bristol, not only this week, but ever since the United States entered the war. Just why residents here are reluctant to display the flag is not known. Many have flags but for some reason fail to display them.

Because the first American flag was made in Pennsylvania, the State holds a prominent place when the Nation observes Flag Day Sunday, according to the State Department of Commerce. According to some historians it was in the Betsy Ross House, still standing

SUPER-CONTROL CENTER TO BE ORGANIZED

Five Counties Surrounding Phila. To Be Included In Plans

BUCKS TO PAY $1800

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—Bucks County will appropriate $1800 toward the expense of a "super-control center" to direct all emergency work over a five-county area during enemy attacks, according to action taken yesterday by the Philadelphia Metropolitan District Defense Council.

Long planned, the control center was definitely assured when the council ratified an agreement apportioning the $15,000 cost of operating the center and the council's offices until Dec. 31st.

Creation of a "super-control center" to direct all emergency work over a five-county area during enemy attacks was voted by the Philadelphia Metropolitan District Defense Council yesterday.

Long planned, the control center was definitely assured when the council ratified an agreement apportioning the $15,000 cost of operating the center and the council's offices until Dec. 31st.

Philadelphia's share of the expense will be $6,000, while Montgomery and Delaware counties will put up $2700 each and Bucks and Chester counties will appropriate $1800 each.

This apportionment of the cost had been worked out by the solicitors and commissioners of the five counties.

Meeting in the Broad St. station building, the civilian defense leaders of the district also authorized Colonel J. H. M. Andrews, commander of the control center, to select his staff.

Andrews disclosed to the council the site tentatively selected for the "nerve center," which cannot be disclosed publicly because of its military importance during air raids.

For purposes of the all-night blackout schedule on the night of June 23-24 for 31 Eastern Pennsylvania counties, the council defined "dusk-to-dawn" as from 8.30 p. m. to 5 a. m. The action was taken to eliminate dispute over borderline violations in the five metropolitan counties.

Traffic questions arising from the blackout plans were cleared up by Dr. A. C. Marts, executive director of the State Defense Council, who attended the meeting with Colonel Henry A. Renninger, acting chief of staff of the Third Civilian Defense Area.

Dr. Marts said that all vehicular and pedestrian traffic would be permitted to continue except during a half-hour "total" blackout period to be signaled without advance notice during the evening.

During that period, he explained

In Philadelphia, that the widowed seamstress put together the American banner in 1777. George Washington, Robert Morris and George Ross, relative to Betsy, were appointed by Congress to suggest a standard flag for all the troops of all the colonies.

The historic house at 239 Arch street, Philadelphia, was built about 1700 and restored in 1937. It is open to the public from nine a. m. to five p. m. weekdays and from 11 a. m. to five p. m. Sundays.

On display in the Public Library in Easton is the Easton Flag, considered by many to be the first stars and stripes in the United Colonies. It is said to have been made in 1776. Certain historians claim that when Captain Abraham Horn, Jr., and his company left the city of Easton for action in the War of 1812, they carried the flag as a present from the women of the community. The emblem is designed with a circle of 12 eight-pointed stars on a solid blue field. She 13th star is in the circle's center. In the upper left-hand corner is a rectangle of red and white stripes.

One of the most interesting flag collections is the group kept in glass cases in the rotunda of the Capitol in Harrisburg. These are the original flags carried by the various Pennsylvania regiments in the Civil War. There are also some banners carried in the Spanish-American War.

The State Flag of Pennsylvania is the same color as the blue field in the Flag of the United States. The staff is nine feet high including the brass spearhead and ferrule. In the center of the flag the Coat of Arms of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is embroidered in silk, the same on both sides. The edges are trimmed with knotted fringe of yellow silk with a cord and tassel attached to the staff of the spearhead. Two Pennsylvania flags always fly on either side of the American flag, from sunrise to sunset atop the Capitol in Harrisburg.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

The Navy Leads The Way

Washington, June 9.

ONE of the hardest things for a public man to do is to swim against the tide—and very few try it. There is slight nourishment in resisting trends—particularly when curtailment of expense and the abolition of jobs are involved. Success along these lines is always accompanied by resentment from the politicians and very little appreciation from the public.

FOR THESE reasons the present retrenchment drive of Secretary of the Navy Knox, strongly supported by Admiral King, is worth more notice than it has received—not because the results will be sensational (though they may be considerable) but because it marks a significant change in point of view and gives promise of a recovery of that sense of proportion, the lack of which has been an outstanding characteristic of this Administration.

UNTIL LAST week, when Mr. Knox issued his order insisting upon the elimination of waste and the abolition of unnecessary jobs, the system in the navy had been much the same as in other Governmental departments. The efficiency of an agency was measured by its size. All up and down the line the effort was toward expansion. Every supervisor conceived it essential to build his particular unit up as large as possible. The aim was to be big. A small division was rated unimportant because it was small. Not until an organization had become unwieldy did it acquire esteem.

THIS IS a strange and senseless notion, but it has been prevalent in Washington for a long time. Written proof that it exists is contained in Mr. Knox's instructions to his

Dr. H. Doyle Webb was named to represent the Defense Council in supervising the construction of the building. Dr. Webb will procure plans from the Federal Government for what is termed a "model layout" for a decontamination building.

A staff of physicians and nurses will then be organized to handle the decontamination work.

Italy in War Two Years Today

London—Italy today observed the second anniversary of her entry into the war amid circumstances suggesting a steady disintegration of the Fascist empire built by Premier Mussolini over the bodies of his enemies.

So far as could be ascertained there were no spontaneous celebrations commemorating 11 Duce's 11th-hour decision to enter the war in June, 1940, by plunging a knife into the back of helpless France.

On the contrary, an official Tass news agency report from Moscow indicated growing dissatisfaction with the manner in which Mussolini, willingly or otherwise, sold his country out to Hitlerism.

Tass said that coincident with the anniversary, Mussolini had launched a purge of the Fascist Party probably exceeding in scope any previous "purification" undertaken during his long tenure as spiritual and military leader of the country.

Thirty thousand persons already have been expelled, the dispatch said, all of them accused, not of crime, treason, subversion or lack of patriotism, but of "anti-Germanism."

The Tass report caused no surprise in official London, as it is taken for granted that the rank and file of the Italian people, long ago disillusioned as to the prowess of their arms, are certain to resent the growing number of German troops and Gestapo men in Italian cities.

Strike at Roebing

Roebing, N. J.—A "sit-down" of 300 workers in the open hearth steel mills of the John A. Roebing's Sons Company here today threatened to halt all work on the company's large war contracts.

About 300 men are involved in this sit-down which resulted from the refusal of the company to grant the unreasonable demands of the union for a 25 per cent. wage increase in the open hearth mills, a company statement said.

Newportville Heights and Edgely Solicitors Are Appointed

The July 4th demonstration committees met last evening to report on the progress being made. The meeting marked the official launching of a campaign to secure more than 500 men, women and children who will participate in the huge stage spectacle entitled "America On Parade" and in the various historical units and floats which will be a part of the mammoth street parade.

Under the chairmanship of Doron Green, many organizations have agreed to have their membership represented in the parade, but the arrival of Russell L. Rowland, professional director, in Bristol has brought about the enlarging of the talent needs and the organization of a talent committee to assist Mr. Green in the recruiting of talent for the pageant. "America On Parade," said Mr. Rowland, "will be a powerfully presented portrayal of the highlights of American history. It will, in a spectacular and dramatic way, show why our citizens of today must be willing to make every possible sacrifice to show our 100% Americanism."

Mrs. Minerva Epstein was named chairman of the Talent Committee and the following were named as members of the committee: Mrs. Catherine Seigle, Mrs. Margaret Murphy, Mrs. Leo L. Lynn, Mrs. Marjorie Popkin, Miss Carmela Farrugio.

Claims Christians Must Take Leadership for Peace

The Rev. Edward K. Knetter, pastor of Harriman Methodist Church, addressed members of the Men's Christian Fellowship of Lower Bucks County, when they held a meeting Monday evening in the Harriman Church. His subject was "Christianity and The War."

The Rev. Knetter stated that he feels Christians today or at least those professing Christianity, are not doing the fundamental things, but are being drawn by a war psychology into the things that are not Christian. "The only way a just peace can come is if the Christians take the leadership even in war time," he continued. "The need of the hour is to assume leadership at all costs, even at the cost of the personal welfare of the individual."

Raymond Dewees, Newportville, presided; with a vocal solo being given by Leslie Rogers.

Refreshments were served; and ping-pong, quoits and darts enjoyed.

New Priorities Plan Is Put Into Effect

Expert assistance on priorities matters is now available to everyone in Montgomery and Bucks counties, at the Norristown District Office of the War Production Board, Felix P. Gross, district W. P. B. Manager, said today. "Mr. Robert J. Bole, priorities analyst, is now in the Norristown office to give priority assistance, especially in setting up the new Production Requirements Plan for manufacturers," Mr. Gross said.

"The Production Requirements Plan will replace most existing types of priority applications, granting of ratings, and extensions, for manufacturers. Every manufacturer should promptly investigate this new method for obtaining priorities; because almost all other priority avenues for getting materials for manufacture will be closed on June 30, 1942," Mr. Gross continued.

"The new plan now makes available on one application a three months supply of materials to manufacturers. Every manufacturer, large or small, may use this simplified plan."

"No firm need now go to Washington for priorities information or ratings," Mr. Gross said; "The quickest service is available through the District Office. Manufacturers may contact Mr. Bole by mail, phone, or wire. His services as a priorities consultant are available to everyone needing such advice. He also has all necessary forms."

An outline for setting up the Production Requirements Plan is available at the Norristown W. P. B. District Office located at 306-S Norristown-Penn Trust Building, Norristown, Pa.

CALENDAR AND HOLIDAYS

The World Calendar Association is at it again. It points out that this year Memorial Day fell on Saturday, a poor time for school children. What good is a holiday on your regular day off, it wants to know. Saturday is a bad time to celebrate a holiday from the mercantile viewpoint, it says, for Saturday ordinarily is the best day of the week for retail stores, the association says.

Now comes the association's conclusion: Holidays should come on the same day of the week each year, and whenever possible that day should be a Monday.

"Such a change," says the association, "calls for a perpetual calendar to replace our present one with its fourteen variations. The most practical perpetual calendar ever devised is The World Calendar of twelve months and equal quarters, whose supporters expect to see it go into effect at the end of 1944."

The association says that this new calendar with its 26 weekdays plus four or five Sundays in each month, with its possibility for Monday holidays and its harmonious regularity will do more than make holidays stop their grasshopping through the week. It will simplify accounting and scheduling problems for business men, the curriculum for educators, and smooth the way for persons in other walks of life.

"Think, too," says the association, "of the time that would be saved in the aggregate if no one ever had to stop to think on what day of the week some day, important to him, falls. Under the World Calendar, once you learned a date, you would know both its place in the month and in the week."

The association has something of a job on its hands. Calendar reform is one attempt to bring a little logic into the world. There are other problems, like spelling reform, removal of puzzles from arithmetic textbooks and making easier English pronunciation. But one must admire the calendar associations for its ceaseless effort in one realm.

COLLEGES AND WAR

To what extent and in what spirit are the colleges and universities measuring up to the needs of a free nation that finds itself in this greatest of all wars?

In their effort to do their patriotic best through a shortening of the four-year curriculum and a natural tendency to emphasize scientific subjects, are they too much inclined to follow a single pattern? In the endeavor to get youth ready for efficient work in the armed services, is there danger that this will be done at a sacrifice in training those needed as professional men and skilled scientific workers on the equally essential home front?

Throughout the nation is evident an eagerness by trustees and faculties, at real personal sacrifice, to conform to national needs. Student bodies are found to be alert, eager to do the thing that will help to win the war, whether to enlist now or keep on studying until called. Alumni, realizing the strain on endowments through the extension of the academic year, are helping financially.

One cannot observe these trends and not experience a sense of real satisfaction. Inevitably, though, they create the impression that post-war college life will be sharply different from that which has gone before.

Hitler's "new order" in Europe seems to be rapidly turning into disorder in some sectors.

HUGE POTENTIAL POWER

DENVER — (INS) — Perhaps the greatest potential water power source in the United States has gone undeveloped in Colorado.

Only 103,000 horsepower of an estimated 2,568,000 horsepower has been harnessed by projects, the Colorado Department of Information reported. Without using dams or reservoirs, the state's running streams alone could generate 765,000 horsepower.

aides concerning his new program. This is what he wrote: "There is a widespread, though false, impression that the grade of a position is determined solely by the number of persons supervised and the volume of work performed. I emphatically state that supervisors will not lose grade nor income through their efforts to carry out this program." Surely nothing could be more illuminating than that. In order to implement his program Mr. Knox first had to make it clear to his supervisors that the idea upon which they had been operating was wrong and then he personally had to guarantee that when they reversed their direction and concentrated upon efficiency instead of size, they would not be penalized. It seems probable that no more revealing statement was ever made by the head of a Government department to his subordinates. It is an unconscious confession not altogether without humor.

OF COURSE, the condition which Mr. Knox seeks to correct in the navy is the natural outcome of long years of multiplying governmental agencies, appropriating for them practically unlimited funds and promulgating the doctrine that thrift and economy are silly, debts and deficits are desirable and compactness has no relation to competency. Now, with the war billions pouring out and many thousands more men needed for the war effort, these tendencies have been greatly accelerated. There is keen competition among the new boards and commissions to grow great. The result is an organization so swollen and distorted that effective functioning is impossible and most of the competent men are overwhelmed by the confusion. Mr. Nelson recognized this the other day when he asked a committee to find out whether "we are growing top-heavy." Mr. Knox did not have to

"If you insist on putting it that way, but you've heard my reasons."

"Well, I'm sunk now!" Chet stared gloomily at the tablecloth for a moment, while the waitress came in with coffee. Transferring his stare to the cup, he suddenly turned on her with a vehemence that almost made her drop the tray. "Call this coffee? Take it back and bring something worth drinking. And what's the cause of the rotten meals we get here? Send up the canteen manager to my office afterwards . . . and let me see your hands! Why, they're awful! I won't have this sort of thing—get your week's wages and don't come here again!"

Throughout all this Truslove and Charles had looked on uncomfortably. As soon as the girl, too startled and upset to make any reply, had left the room, Charles said quietly: "I'm not sure that was very fair of you, Chet. She wasn't responsible."

"What more can I do? Her hands—you should have seen them."

"Yes, yes . . . I daresay."

There was a long silence. Then, Chet exploded: "Well, have I done anything wrong? You talk about reorganization—what do you mean by it? If it isn't just a word, tell me. Unless it's merely that you haven't got the courage to say outright that you're not going to risk your precious cash. I'd respect you more for saying that than for hiding behind all this reorganization pi-jaw."

"Pi-jaw"—that was the word they used at Netherton for interviews with the headmaster. It stirred in him a little instant pity for Chet.

"I'm not hiding behind anything."

"You mean you'd lend the money if we did reorganize?"

Charles was silent a moment; Chet went on: "That's a fair question, isn't it, Truslove? Let him answer, then we'll know where we stand. Let's have a straight 'yes' or 'no,' for heaven's sake."

"Very well, then . . . probably I would."

Chet beamed. "Fine, old chap. I take back any aspersions, God bless. Now all you've got to tell us is what you'd call reorganizing. What have I got to do? Or what's anybody got to do? And for that matter, who's got to be the fellow to do it?"

ask a committee. He knew.

—O—

JUST WHO in the higher navy circles first concluded that the wheels were clogged with red tape and the pay roll cluttered with useless people is not clear, but the action came from Mr. Knox and the credit should go to him. The slashing already has begun and the effect is salubrious. More work is being done with fewer people. Nor are the dropped jobholders just tossed out into the cold, cold world. All that is happening is that they are released from jobs where they had no useful work to do and made available for jobs in the armed services or defense factories where they really are needed. Thus, there is a net gain from both angles.

—O—

IT IS interesting that, in addition to his personal guarantee to the supervisors that they will not be punished for being efficient, Mr. Knox is offering a series of rewards, including cash bonuses and promotions, for those who most effectively reverse their direction and correct that "widespread (though false) impression" of which he spoke so revealingly. That impression was first created back in the halcyon days of Mr. Harry Hopkins when the merits of his

WPA supervisors were measured by the number of people they could induce to go on the relief rolls. Since Pearl Harbor, the Secretary of the Navy has had a good many kicks in the pants—some of them well deserved. But, certainly he should get a few pats on the back for this apparently determined effort to abolish the long-established idea that everything must be sacrificed for size. Is it too much to hope that Mr. Knox's example will be followed by other department heads and not be frowned upon by the White House?

Miss Viola E. Allen is
Wed to Rev. P. A. Brindisi

EDGELEY, June 10—A resident of Edgely became the bride of a clergyman at 12 o'clock noon today, when Miss Viola E. Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Allen, of this place, and the Rev. P. Arthur Brindisi, Edgely, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brindisi, of Milford, N. J., were united in marriage.

The chapel of Princeton Seminary, Princeton, N. J., was the scene of the nuptial ceremony, performed by the Rev. Harvey L. Jennings, of Frenchtown, N. J. At the conclusion of an organ recital by Miss Hilda MacArthur, the bride entered the edifice on the arm of her father. She wore a striking gown of white duchess bridal satin, with trim of Chantilly lace and seed pearls. The gown was entrained. Her veil of net was held by a halo of orange blossoms; and her slippers were of white satin. She carried a white Bible covered with white orchids, and from this was suspended a shower of bouvardia.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Clarence Young, a sister of the bride, was attired in a floor-length gown of blue star-dust. Her matching hat of net had trim of pink rosebuds. Slippers were of blue satin, and the attendant carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds, blue delphinium and baby breath.

The vocalist for the occasion was Mr. Lester Paul, Syracuse, N. Y. His selections were "I Love You Truly" and "Because."

Members of the bridal party were served at a reception at Fischer's Tea Room, Seauders Falls, N. J.

The costume chosen by the bride for a journey to parts of New York state includes a navy blue linen suit, white linen hat with navy trim, and blue and white accessories.

The Rev. Mr. Brindisi is a graduate of Frenchtown high school; Houghton College, New York state; and of Princeton Seminary, Princeton, N. J. The bride graduated from Bristol high school, and from Philadelphia Business College.

Make of us thy faithful servants and devoted children in the Name of Christ. Amen.

Jerry Jerome did the hurling for the wheel-makers and pitched excellent ball in blanking the Tan-Art boys from the hit column. He had four strikeouts to his credit.

EAGLE EYE By Jack Sords

AMERICAN LEAGUE PITCHERS ARE HAVING A TOUGH TIME GETTING THE BALL PAST HASSETT. HE SELDOM STRIKES OUT.

VOLTZ NINE MOVES INTO FOURTH PLACE BY DEFEATING ST. ANN'S; "SAINTS" GO INTO CELLAR POSITION

With a 5-3 victory over St. Ann's, the Voltz-Texaco team moved into fourth place in the Bristol Suburban League last night. The loss sent the "Saints" into a deadlock with Badenhausen for the cellar.

A two-run rally in the sixth inning gave the gasoliers the triumph. It all started with an error by Cervello who tumbled a tap by Mazzillo. Shoemaker followed with a hit down the third base line. Berry bunted to Barbetta and all hands were safe when no one covered the first base bag. Kramers hit to A. Barbetta whose throw to the plate was too late to get Mazzillo.

Dougherty walked forcing in Shoemaker. Bragg struck out and Tazik hit into a double-play.

Both teams had five safe hits. St. Ann's made four of their five in the fifth after Bragg had set them down without a hit for four frames. Cervello kept his hits well scattered and was given bad breaks all during the game. It was two errors which helped Voltz-Texaco to its first pair of runs.

An error paved the way for the third run while his own error started the uprising in the fifth.

With the exception of the fifth inning, Bragg had the game under control at all times. He walked a batter and four hits gave the Saints their trio of markers.

Harry Berry snapped out of his batting slump by getting two out of three. His fly-chasing in centerfield also helped Bragg out of several tight spots.

MAKE PERFECT SCORES AT TWILIGHT SHOOT

The first twilight blue rock shoot of the year was held by members of the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association last evening on the club grounds at the Assay farm, opposite Silver Lake.

Following the shoot the regular June business meeting was held at the Club House. Routine business was transacted and committee reports heard.

Four squads of shooters participated in the trap shoot preceding the meeting. One perfect score of 25 was rung up by M. Locke. William Warner and Maurice Delker also both turned in near-perfect scores.

As a result of the success of the shoot last evening members decided to hold a twilight shoot at each one of the remaining Summer meetings.

John R. Burd, chairman of the fish committee, reported that the fish chute at the dam of Silver Lake had been erected and that members had reported seeing fish ascending this trough into the lake.

General discussion on the annual summer outing was held. Some mem-

A member of the committee was accepted. Mr. Johnson is out of town a considerable portion of the time and therefore could not serve. The vacancy was filled by naming Serrill D. Dettelson.

Dr. Lehman reported that the Manual Training Department of the Bristol High School will make containers for the supplies to be kept at the emergency stations.

William Begley was named as a committee of one to confer with the Borough Solicitor, Howard I. James, Esq., to prepare the necessary papers for use of the ground on which the building is to be located and the disposition of the building at the end of the duration.

only emergency vehicles may travel the streets, and they must bear large "E" signs and have their lights so hooded as to be invisible from a height of 5000 feet.

He defined emergency as military, police, fire, Federal, State, municipal and civilian defense conveyances.

When the total blackout period begins, he said, buses, street cars, private automobiles, elevated trains and bicycles must halt at their first opportunity and turn off their lights. Pedestrians must go indoors.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Among Pennsylvania's surplus resources is all the raw material required to supply both rubber and gasoline for the entire eastern coast of the United States.

The Keystone State has vast limestone deposits which have made it for many years the greatest producer of Portland cement on this continent and also one of the Nation's largest sources of lime and limestone. It is also the Nation's largest coal producer, and in the course of the years has supplied the homes and industries of our Nation with more than ten billion tons of that fuel—a quantity of mined carbon equal in bulk to the tallest mountain on the earth.

These coal deposits, according to a statement by the State Planning Board of the Pennsylvania Department of Commerce, are closest to the Atlantic seaboard of any large coal field in the Nation, and are closest also to New York and to New England. Together with the State's limestone, they provide a source for unlimited quantities of both synthetic rubber and of nylon, and might also produce in case of need a supply of liquid fuel and lubricating oil sufficient to meet the needs of all our east coast motor cars, trucks, airplanes and Diesel powered shipping.

These possibilities insure the future of American industry, but they are not available today in our present emergency because of the time necessary for the erection of suitable plants. For many generations coal has been important only as a fuel. It has only lately been realized that it is much more than a fuel. The time may well be responsible American authority. A German account of the Japanese communique interpreted it as claiming that strong points in the Aleutian chain had been occupied by the invading fleet.

As the American forces drove back the Japanese armada in the Pacific, the Russian defenders of Sevastopol fought off a determined Nazi attempt to close in on the Crimean port of Sevastopol, in a battle that raged into its sixth day. The Red Army forces were not only standing firm but were inflicting heavy losses on the attack-come when the burning of coal merely as a source of heat may seem a criminal waste of the Nation's most valuable source of industrial raw material.

A shovelful of Pennsylvania coal represents not only heat for our homes and power for our industries, but also, in the future, tires for our cars and gasoline and oil to drive them along the highway. Even today it can provide shirts, dresses, stockings, and underwear of the strongest, most durable silk-like material ever known, as well as dyes of every hue of the rainbow, and of many shades never seen in any rainbow. That shovelful of coal represents, also, drugs which are today performing miracles of healing, drugs which have robbed pneumonia of its age-old terrors, drugs which have conquered some of the most dangerous internal infections, powerful antiseptics and anodynes which have brought to thousands of sufferers rest and relief from pain.

By a process called hydrogenation, which means that adding of hydrogen gas to the carbon compounds in coal under great pressure, there can be derived from coal a motor fuel similar to gasoline, and of such high quality that in Great Britain it is used almost exclusively by the Royal Air Force. In America, with our abundant oil supplies, we have not ever, in the past, found it necessary to develop that process. If we had done so, however, the present shortage of gasoline on our eastern coast could never have occurred. The importance of making use of this process against just such an emergency has been frequently pointed out by the State Planning Board of the Pennsylvania Department of Commerce during the past two years, and it is gratifying to note that on March 25th the Appropriations Committee of the United States Senate recommended the allocation of $85,000 for erection of an experimental plant in Pittsburgh for the extraction of liquid fuel from coal.

Coke mixed with limestone in the heat of an electric furnace forms calcium carbide from which acetylene gas can be generated. From acetylene is derived butadiene, the source of the type of artificial rubber most used today in Europe.
